INTRODUCTION.

THE Library of Friends of Philadelphia, owes its origin to a bequest made by our worthy friend Thomas Chalkley, as appears by the following extract from his Will, dated the 19th of 2d month, 1741, viz :—"Having spent most of my days and strength in the work and service of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and having been joined as a member of the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia for above these forty years, to them, as a token of my love, I give my small library of books."

A transcript from the Will was presented to the Monthly Meeting of Friends of Philadelphia, held the 30th of 2d month, 1742, and Robert Jordan, a member and eminent minister of that meeting, offering his services as Librarian, the books, being 111 in number, were delivered into his possession, with a catalogue of their titles. Soon after this, Robert Jordan deceased, and Anthony Benezet being requested by the Monthly Meeting to take charge of the Library, it was accordingly removed to his house ; where it continued to be kept until the erection of the meeting-house, at the corner of Fourth and Chesnut Streets.

The small collection left by Thomas Chalkley, was gradually increased by purchases and the donations of benevolent individuals, among whom we may particularly notice Dr. John Fothergill, Peter Collinson, David Barclay of London, grandson of the Apologist, and James Bright of this city. Little attention, however, was given to it, and the books having been loaned without a regular record of the persons who borrowed them, many volumes were irrecoverably lost.

In the year 1765, the attention of the Monthly Meeting seems to have been awakened to the importance of preserving a collection of the writings of our early friends, and other suitable books, for the perusal of its members; and a committee was appointed to devise some method of rendering the Library more useful—to collect the books which had been lent out—to purchase others, and report the names of suitable friends to have the charge of them. This committee recovered some of the missing volumes, repaired those which were injured, and made a new catalogue of the whole. John Todd, then a teacher under “the Overseers of the Public School, founded by charter in the town and county of Philadelphia,” was engaged as the Librarian. He entered upon his duties in the fall of 1765, and the following minute of the Monthly Meeting, made the 30th of 10th month, 1766, may serve to illustrate the value of money, as well as the moderate views of our friends at that period, viz:—“John Todd produced his account for his attendance on the library for one year, and sundry expenses paid on that service, amounting to £2 8s. 6d., ($6 47,) and credits for 10 shillings ($1 33) received from such borrowers as did not return the books borrowed in the time limited by the rules. The treasurer is desired to pay the balance, £1 18s. 6d., ($5 14,) and John Todd is continued to the care and oversight of the Library, and to deliver out books at such times as may be most convenient to the borrowers and himself."

The first attempt at any thing like a system for conducting the Library, appears to have been made at this period, and it may be interesting to recur to the regulations then adopted respecting the loan of the books. They are as follows:—

1st. The Librarian to give attendance on Seventh-day of every week, in the afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, in order to lend out and receive the books; and shall keep a book, columnwise, in which shall be noted the title of the book, the name of the borrower, the time for which the book is lent, the sum for which the note was given, the day when the book shall be returned, and the forfeitures arising from all defaults.

2d. Each borrower shall give a promissory note to the Librarian, for the sum set in the written catalogue against the book he borrows; conditioned for returning the same book within the time mentioned in the said catalogue; at the expiration of which time, if the borrower inclines to keep the book longer, he must renew his note.

3d. Every borrower who keeps a book beyond the time limited in his note, may return it on any of the four next succeeding attendance days, paying sixpence for every week's neglect; which not being done, the note to be deemed forfeited.

4th. If a borrower, who has forfeited his note, shall afterwards return the book undefaced, the sum mentioned in his note shall be remitted; he paying the weekly fine.

5th. Books returned, are to be delivered into the hands of the Librarian, to be examined whether damaged or not.

6th. No borrower, from whom any penalty or forfeiture is due, or who hath damaged any book, shall be permitted to borrow another book until satisfaction be made.

7th. The Librarian is authorized and required to apply for, and collect the forfeitures, as often as they may happen.

8th. That the money arising from the forfeitures shall be applied to purchasing such books, to be added to the Library, as the monthly meeting may direct.

The improvement which took place in the Library at the time alluded to, although considerable, still left it in a very imperfect state. The number of books was small, and those principally relating to the history and doctrines of the Society of Friends. While such as were of a general character, were very rare. The late John Pemberton, who appears to have taken a warm interest in the improvement of the Library, and was actively engaged in its promotion, bequeathed a large number of books to it, as appears by the following extract from his Will, dated, 1st of 4th Month, 1794: "I give and bequeath unto my aforesaid friends, John Field and William Wilson, and the survivor of them, after the decease of my wife, one half of my Library of books, in trust, for the use and benefit, and perusal of Friends of the three Monthly Meetings in this city ; and to be placed in the Library for that purpose ; wishing the beloved youth were more willing to read and to become acquainted with the trials, sufferings, and religious experience of our worthy ancients."

After the erection of the buildings belonging to the Society of Friends, on Mulberry street, the Library was removed to the room where it now is ; and in 1817, was placed under the care of a committee, consisting of one Friend from each Monthly Meeting, in the city. Within the last two years, nearly five hundred volumes have been added to the collection, consisting principally of standard works of History, Biography, Literature, Science, and the Arts. The whole number of volumes in the Library is about 2300.

In whatever point of view we regard this Institution, it must appear very important to the Society in this city. As a depository of the ancient writings of Friends it is invaluable, furnishing the most complete collection in America ; and no expense should be spared to add to it such scarce and valuable works of that description, as are not already on its shelves ; nor can it be doubted, that an enlarged view of our duty to the younger members of our Society, will animate us to place within their reach, a much more copious, though not less careful selection from the works of standard authors, in the several departments of learning. The trade of book-making at the present day, has greatly increased the number of works which are of an objectionable or more pernicious character, and few persons have the leisure or inclination to examine and select from the great mass, such only as are of a proper character for their children to read.

The purchase of a sufficient variety of books to interest the minds, and employ the time of young persons, involves an expense, which but few parents can conveniently incur.

These are strong inducements to cherish this Institution, by an increase of the funds devoted to the purchase of books; inasmuch as while it holds out encouragement to our members to cultivate a taste for reading, and mental improvement, it furnishes them with the means of gratifying it, without any personal expense, and from a Library, where the volumes have been selected with special reference to the exclusion of every thing which might be injurious to the youthful mind.

RULES

FOR THE

GOVERNMENT OF THE LIBRARY.

1. The Library shall be open on Seventh-day afternoon, at such hours as the Committee shall from time to time direct.

2. Members of the Society of Friends, shall be entitled to use the Library, on signing a promissory Note for such sum as shall be agreed upon, conditioned for the return of the books taken out by them, uninjured, and within the time herein-after specified.

3. No person shall have out, at one time, more than two 12mo. volumes, or one of a larger size. And all books must be returned within two weeks, except Quartos and Folios; which may be kept out three weeks, and in case of failure to return a book within the time specified, a fine of $6\frac{1}{4}$ cents per volume, for each additional week, shall be paid to the Librarian:

nor shall any book be considered as returned, or be renewed, unless handed to the Librarian for examination and entry.

4. In case a book shall have been lost or injured, the damage shall be assessed by the Librarian, and the amount paid by the borrower, before he or she can be again permitted to use the Library.

5. Minors applying for the use of the Library, must be accompanied by a friend, who will become responsible for the safe return of the books borrowed by them.

EXPLANATIONS.

Folio books are designated in the Catalogue by an italic F or folio.

Quarto by Q.

Octavo by O.

Duodecimo and smaller sizes by D.

The first of these is the fact that the government has been very successful in its efforts to reduce the deficit. This has been achieved by a combination of measures, including a reduction in interest rates, a reduction in government spending, and a reduction in the money supply. These measures have been successful in reducing the deficit, but they have also had some negative effects. For example, the reduction in interest rates has led to a rise in inflation, and the reduction in government spending has led to a rise in unemployment.
 However, the government has been successful in its efforts to reduce the deficit, and this is a positive achievement. The government has also been successful in its efforts to reduce the money supply, which has helped to control inflation. The government has also been successful in its efforts to reduce unemployment, which is a positive achievement. The government has been successful in its

The first of these is the fact that the system is not a simple one, but a complex one, involving many factors which are not yet fully understood.
 The second is that the system is not a static one, but a dynamic one, in which the various factors are constantly changing and interacting with each other. The third is that the system is not a closed one, but an open one, in which the various factors are constantly being influenced by the environment.
 The fourth is that the system is not a linear one, but a non-linear one, in which the various factors are constantly interacting in a non-linear fashion.
 The fifth is that the system is not a deterministic one, but a probabilistic one, in which the various factors are constantly interacting in a probabilistic fashion. The sixth is that the system is not a simple one, but a complex one, involving many factors which are not yet fully understood. The seventh is that the system is not a static one, but a dynamic one, in which the various factors are constantly changing and interacting with each other. The eighth is that the system is not a closed one, but an open one, in which the various factors are constantly being influenced by the environment. The ninth is that the system is not a linear one, but a non-linear one, in which the various factors are constantly

The first of the year was a very cold one, and the weather was very disagreeable. The wind was from the north, and the rain was very heavy.
 The snow was very deep, and the ice was very thick. The water was very cold, and the ground was very hard. The trees were very bare, and the leaves were very dry. The grass was very dry, and the flowers were very faded. The birds were very scarce, and the animals were very thin. The people were very poor, and the houses were very old. The streets were very dirty, and the air was very foul. The sun was very hot, and the moon was very bright. The stars were very clear, and the sky was very blue. The clouds were very white, and the rain was very heavy.

The first of these is the fact that the number of cases of smallpox in 1880 was 1,000, which is a very large number for a city of this size. The second fact is that the mortality was very high, being 100 per cent. The third fact is that the disease was very contagious, and that it spread very rapidly. The fourth fact is that the disease was very fatal, and that it caused a great deal of suffering. The fifth fact is that the disease was very common, and that it was found in every part of the city. The sixth fact is that the disease was very dangerous, and that it was a great source of alarm to the people. The seventh fact is that the disease was very contagious, and that it spread very rapidly. The eighth fact is that the disease was very fatal, and that it caused a great deal of suffering. The ninth fact is that the disease was very common, and that it was found in every part of the city. The tenth fact is that the disease was very dangerous, and that
 people.

The page number '117' is visible in the top left corner, and '118' is visible in the top right corner. The text appears to be a continuous narrative or a list of items, with some lines starting with larger, possibly decorative or section-indicating letters. The ink is dark, and the paper shows signs of age and wear.

APPENDIX.

[THE Committee are indebted to their late friend JOSEPH JAMES, for the following remarks upon the curious and interesting quarto manuscript, No. 10. See page 4 of the Catalogue.]

The Manuscript in Friends' Library, presented by John Pemberton, bought of John Kendall, Colchester, Great Britain, for one guinea, is a part of the writings of Ambrose, Bishop of Mediolanensis. His works, contained in two large folio volumes, published by John Keerberg, at Antwerp, Anno 1516, are in the Loganian Library, Philadelphia.

There is also in the Philadelphia Library, a manuscript of a part of the above mentioned Commentary of Ambrose ; the date of which is marked in the beginning, as being written Anno 1016, the words of which are separated from each other, which is not the case with the copy under examination.

Prior to the tenth century, the manuscripts were frequently written without any division between the words, e. g. "inprincipioeratsermoille;" but after this time, the words appear to have been regularly divided, as they are at present ; which affords a proof, that the copy of Ambrose's Commentaries on the Sacred Scriptures, in Friends' Library, must have been written at or before the year of our Lord, 900 ; and it is, in my opinion, the most ancient manuscript I have seen.

In the Library of Shoenborn Gaibacensis (a German,) are six different manuscripts of Horace's works, all probably written at various periods ; one of which appears to be similar to the copy above alluded to, and might have been written somewhere about A. D. 800 or 900. The fac simile's of these I have seen, and they appear to throw some light on this curious manuscript, as to the time when it was written.

From the foregoing it may be inferred, that this is a part of Ambrose's works ; and that prior to the art of printing, which was discovered about the year 1430, there were several who excelled in the art of penmanship—and as the clergy then could command the wealth of their parishioners, under a pretence of benefiting the church, they would therefore find no difficulty in employing the most skilful penman, who might be capable of making a transcript, in the elegant manner in which these Commentaries were performed : the time and price for copying any work of one of the fathers of the church, (which was the title of the Bishops of that time,) would be an object of small consideration.

Ambrose was born in the year of our Lord 340, and died in 397, being 57 years old.
